CINCINNATI, July 28.—[By the Associated Press.] Today has been a regular field day between the saloon-keepers and police. Of the 272 saloonists who met last week all, with the exception of about 40, tried to keep cape. The consequence there tried to keep open. In consequence there were about 150 arrests. By far the greater part of the saloons were, to all appearances, closed. Over the Rhine two or three riots slosed. Over the Rhine two or three riots took place this afternoon.

At Fifteenth and Pine streets, about 4 o'clock the police undertook to arrest a man fer disorderly conduct. A crowd of 1500, composed chiefly of hoodlums that infest the neighborhood, quickly gathered, and the cry of "Mob the police!" was raised. The mob set upon the police with clubs and fists, and one policeman was badly beaten, his scalp being cut, but he was not seriously injured. About a dozen policemen kept the his scaip being cut, but he was not seriously injured. About a dozen policemen kept the crowd back with clubs, while an officer arrested the man.

On the corner of Walnut and Tweifth streets at Arilinger's saloon, an unsuccessful attempt to resist the police was made.

Three reporters who went over the Rhine this evening to look up matters, had quite an adventure. They were suspected of being sples and the crowd demanded that they give an account of themselves. Two of them gave satisfactory reasons, but the third was obliged to turn and run down Pine street followed by the mob, and he only escaped serious injury by being rescued by the police.

More saloons were closed today than on any previous Sunday since the attempt was first made to enforce the law.

The penalty of revocation of license had its effect, and today the police were able to arrest seven violators of the law.

The Dead Anarchist's Widow Make

She said: "The fall of the Bastille, while She said: "The fall of the Bastille, while a blow to tyranny, did not destroy economic slavery. There must be another revolution, a revolution against the bastilles of labor. The people will rise, storm and capture those bastilles and they will bear out the heads of those devils, those capitalists, on pikes and staves. [Vociferous applause,] They presume to rule by the divine right of the rifie and Gatling gun, the noose and the prison. You must selze those rifles and those Gatling guns, destroy the gallows and storm the prisons. You must not march in the street to be moved down, but you must get within the walls, and victory is yours. I say there will be a revolution. I say you men are brave enough to rise and put down the tyrants. If the revolution comes the red flag waves; the bastille falls; the common people are triumphant, and ommon people are triumphant, and y repeats itself."

BRETHREN DISAGREE.

Trouble Among Masons Over the Scottish Rite.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—[By the Associated Press.] The controversy which has been general among the Masonic fraternity throughout the country, respecting the Ceremon Scottish rite has culminated here in a issue of an edict by Harrison Dingman, Most Worshipful Grand Master of Masons of the Nistrict of Columbia, pucker data ization clandestine and warning all members of that rite that they are liable to discipline from the Grand Lodge, unless they at once withdraw from said Cerneau body.

The main reason for the edict, aside from other questions arising in the Scottish-rite controversy, is stated to be that the Cerneau organ has established relations of amity and Masonic correspondence with the Grand Orient of France, the governing body of Masons in that country, which is under the ban of, at least, every English-speaking grand lodge in the world, because the Grand Orient has stricken the name of God from its ritual. The grand lodges of this country, it is said, have an additional grievance against the Grand Orient of France, because the latter persists in recognizing the negro grand lodges of the United States.

BALTIMORE, July 28.—[By the Associated Press.] It seems that the Governor issued no warrant for Kirain's arrest, and Detective Norris will be obliged to go back to Mississippi alone, as the Grand Jury of to Mississippi alone, as the Grand Jury of Marion county, where the offense was committed, has not yet found an indictment against the pugilists.

They Will Ignore Prohibitionists and Woman Suffragists.

Washington, July 28.—[By the Associated Press.] Chairman Jones of the National Greenback Committee will tomorrow issue a circular letter in which he will say:

"In reply to many inquiries from the Prohibitionists, female suffragists and representatives of other sentimental and semi-political organizations asking admission or political organizations asking admission or what action will be taken by the coming Greenback convention on the questions they represent I desire to say, with due re-spect to all who honestly advocate such doc-trines, that it is the unanimous opinion among the National Greenbackers that the National Greenback Convention, to be held at Cincinnati, September 12th, will confine its declarations of principles to questions of restored fraternity, the spirit of true American nationality among the entire people; opposition to the dangerous sectionalism of the Solid North and Solid South; to the payment of the public debt according to the original contract; to trusts, board of trade xambling and the making of prices for American farm preducts; to English control over the volume of our money; to English capital mahufacturing or handling the products of American labor and to such other questions as effect the material interests of the American people and a free government."

The letter then says that trade and commerce is languishing for the want of more money, and declares that an application of Greenback principles would stimulate business and increase the prosperity of the laboring classes and of the merchant and manufacturer.

New York Typos Opposed to Re-

New York, July 28.—[By the Associated Press.] Today's meeting of Typographical Union No. 6 is said to have been the largest ever held in this city. A thorough discussion of the troubles of the past week was had, and by a vote of about 800 to 400 it was decided to resist to the utmost any reduc-tion in the price of composition. They regard the "Big Six" as the backbone of trades unionism in the United States, and trades unionism in the Office States, and it is assumed that if the scale were reduced here, in the printers' stronghold, reductions would follow in the trade all over the

RESULTS OF THE GREAT STORM AT CHICAGO.

Three More Lives Known to Have Been Lost-A Vast Amount of Damage Done by the Rain.

By Telegraph to The Times. CHICAGO, July 28.—[By the Associated Press.] From all accounts received today and this evening, last night's storm was one and this evening, last night's storm was one of the worst ever known in the history of the city, both for amount of rainfall and damage done. Aside from the awful catastrophe at Twenty-first and Leavitt streets, where eight people were killed by a falling house, three lives are known to have been lost.

A child was killed by lightning, and two men walking on the railroad track were stunned by a shock and killed by a passing

The damage to basement stores in the business portion of the city is very great, and in the residence districts many houses were more or less injured by wind or lightning. All slong the streets in the outskirts of the city the storm may be traced by failent trees and wrecked fonces and outbuild-condition.

The trems dous rainfall raised the Chicago River rapidly, and all last night and today it has been flowing into Lake Michigan at a speed of about six miles an hour. It is reported that traces of the filthy water can be discovered nearly as far out as the in.

Telegraph and felephone wires throughout the city and suburbs were badly used up, and today large gangs of men have been busily employed repairing the damages. City fire engines were to be seen at many points in the heart of the city, pumping out water from basements, stores, restaurants and other places.

During the height of the storm last night the propeller Boston of the New York Central line, grain laden, coming down the south branch from an elevator, became unmanageable on account of the swift current and swung broadside to against a bridge.

It was held in that position until this evening, notwithstanding all efforts to release
it. It took two railroad engines on shore, two large tags on the river and an elaborate complication of tackle to release the big boat, and in the meantime river and railroad traffic in that vicinity were completely suspended.

NASHVILLE (Tenn.), July 28 .- Lucinda NASHVILLE (Tenn.), July 22.—Lucinda Bedford, a wealthy colored woman, aged 85, and Emily Persons, her niece, aged 65, were poisoned yesterday, the poison being put in their coffee by Catherine Smail (colored), who claims she wanted to kill Mrs. Bedford's cook, Grace Hunter. Mrs. Bedrort is very iil, but will recover. Her niece died in the evening. The real motive of the Small woman for the poisoning is not known.

Domestic Trouble and Suicide. RICHMOND (Va.), RICHMOND (Va.), July 28.—James Conaty, a barkeeper who left his wife a few weeks ago, went to her house tonight and asked her to take a walk. She refused, whereupon he cut her across the throat with a razor. Conaty then went into an adjoining room, stood before a mirror and cut his own throat from ear to ear. He died in a few moments. His wife will recover.

Sad Ending of an Excursion.
BALTIMORE (Md.), July 28.—Aboard a small sailboat in the harbor tonight was a merry party of five—three women and two men. The excursion steamer Tolchester, splashing along on her return trip at 9:30, struck the little boat and threw the occu-pants into the water, drowning John Rietz, Mary Winer and Mary Kalb.

The Oaklands seem to have gotten back in their old-time batting form, and hit the ball until the seams began to open. The Stocktons, on the other hand, seemed to have used up all their energies in their practice work, so that when they got in the game they piled up seven errors, three of which fell to Whitehead, and were quite costly. And still they come—suggestions of names for the new hotel. Mr. J. Grebe writes to THE TIMES as follows:

names for the new hotel. Mar. 3. Greek writes to THE TIMES as follows:

As there seems to be a lack of names for the "big hotel," I have a few to suggest. First—"Corona." It is true they have the "Coronado" "down below," but that being the adjective, we would have the noun, the substantive, suggesting the superior substantial resources of Los Angeles.

Second—"Hotel del Mundo" speaks for itself—the world's hotel.

Some one has proposed the name "Tolece." That bygone race has left a relic near us, historic and interesting.

Third—"Casa Grande." Perhaps it was in ages gone by the Toltee's "big hotel." All this country here—Arizona, California, Mexico—was once Toltecland.

As for historic interest, there is your name, suggestive of the dimensions and grandlosity of the "big hotel," there is your name—"Casa Grande."

If you wish your big house to win and be popular with the gold-bugs of the country, why then name it "The Stanford," or "The Leland Stanford."

Of all the names thus far given for the new hotel, that of "The Semi-Tropic," appeals to my taste and sense of fitness as the most appropriate. It is suggestive of sunny skies and lucious fruits, and in itself describes the climate and productions of this section and gives it a distinctive character from other parts of the State. The name, whenever spoken would suggest to the frozen Easterner an escape from snow and ice to a land of perpetual sunshine.

SIMILAR CAUSES; SAME EFFECTS

A recent dispatch from St. Paul, Minn., states that 300 squatters on 6,000,000 acres of land, owned by a New York syndicate, were evicted by an overwhelming force of police and paid agents of the syndicate. There is nothing left of the thickly-populated little settlement but a few ruined cellars and some small gardens. Some of the squatters had lived as long as fifteen years in the houses destroyed, but there was no chance for resistance, and the women pleaded and cried in vain. The squatters are now located on the open ground, without shelter of any sort, crying for work or bread. One shanty which was demolished was occupied, by a widow, whose husband was injured in an accident while in the city's employ, and had died the day before in the County Hospital. She has eight children to support, three of whom are sick with smallpox.

REGULATING THE PEDDLERS.

A law which has just gone into effect in Maine has caused considerable oughout the union, even in distant California.

The law in question limits the privilege of peddling to American citizens of good moral character. Two pures were in view in the enactment of the law; one the protection of local tradesmen, who, as taxpavers and rentpayers, are entitled to some consideration as against irresponsible wanderers; and the other the tection of citizens, and especially of women, from peddlers who are menac ing or insulting, or possibly are thieves who adopt this plan for acquainting themselves with the interior of houses which they intend to rob. The law exempts commercial travelers selling goods by sample to dealers only, and it exempts from the payment of license fees sick or disabled soldiers or sailors. It also allows a person to sell without license "fruit grown in the United ing the order of Commander-in-Chief States, fruit trees, provisions, live animals, brooms, agricultural implements fuel, newspapers, books, pamphlets agricultural products of the United of his own invention, or in has become interested."

Such provisions eliminate from the law any features which might be termed a hardship, and commend it to the attention of other States.

THE THREE AMERICAS EXPOSI TION.

New York is struggling to capture the Three Americas Exposition, to be held in 1892, in celebration of the 400th anniversary of Columbus's discovery, which exposition it is now proposed to hold in Washington. The Washington press, however, is presenting very cogent reasons why the Exposition should be held at the National Capitol. Alexander D. Anderson, the Secretary of the Board of Promotion of the Exposition, makes, among others, the following points in its favor:

lowing points in its favor:

"As it is neither a manufacturing nor commercial city it has no foreign commerce, hence New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, New Orleans, San Francisco. Nashville, Richmond, Savannah, Kansas City, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, and other industrial cities will derive the trade benefits of the Three Americas Exposition. With the Exposition located at Washington, which is neutral ground, the various cities mentioned will have an equal chance in competition for Spanish-American trade, which is one of the fundamental ideas of the movement, whereas if

It is further argued that, at the Na tional Capitol, there is an exposition nucleus or plant to commence with, which has already cost over $50,000,000 that is to say, the National Muesum, Smithsonian, Washington Monument, the Capitol buildings, the Patent office and the various department buildings, with their relics, treasures of art and practical workings of the Government, which are all practically an exhibit and constant source of attraction to

The Exposition is intended to be a permanent one, and its establishment at the National Capitol would add largely to the attractions of the city. It certainly seems that Washington is the proper site for this enterprise, which much good is expected to accrue to the Nation at large.

MR. BALLOU, the celebrated author and traveler, recently returned to Bos2 ton from a long trip to Alaska, where he has been taking notes preparatory to writing a book on that region. He told a representative of the Boston Traveller that he was enthusiastic about the present prosperity and fu-ture promise of this far northwestern portion of our country. Mr. Ballou says that the general conceptions of Alaska are erroneous. The sea which lines its shores is so full of fish as to be a never-ceasing marvel. Bering Sea is an immense reservoir of cod-fish, rivaling Newfoundland. The hills and valleys of the islands and mainland support more fur-bearing animals than can be found on any other part of the continent. - Sitka. says Mr. Ballou, is warmer than Portland, Me., and the winters are milder than those of Boston. The Treadwell gold mill, on Douglass Island, will send $2,000,000 worth of pure gold to the mint at San Francisco during the present year.

IT is a curious contrast to present temperance legislation that Massachusetts by statute, less than one hundred years ago, exempted from taxation for five years "all brew houses wherein shall be made 100 barrels of ale or beer annually." The reason for this exemption was that these manufacturers afforded a market for barley, and thus promoted husbandry, besides furnishing a valuable article for export. A further reason will sound strangely to temperance people now. It was that the wholesome qualities of these malt liquors are promotive of public health, and that they are the best means of preventing excessive use of spirituou liquors. Notwithstanding the stateof Prohibitionists, statistics show that per capita the use of strong liquors in this country is much less than it was in the olden time.

We only trust that this energy and enterprise will not suddenly cease when the subscription list comes round. UP IN WASHINGTON.

Tacoma Enjoying a Sort of Quiet

TACOMA (Wash.), July 25.—[Special Correspondence of THE TIMES.] Tacoma, otherwise the "city of destiny," is now experiencing what may be termed a "quiet boom." The recent burning of the business portion of Seattle has given this place quite an impetus in every branch of business, and it has also flooded the town with an idle class who are kept industriously at work looking for places. In fact, every trade, profession and business, from that of bootblack and realestate "steerer" to the banking business, is overdone and overcrowded to a point where competition means a rivalry almost ruinous. The buildings in course of construction are of a substantial nature, mainly brick; yet this is the "home" of the lumber business.
Judging from these improvements, it is not likely that the town will grow too fast for the people, or the people accumulate too rapidly for the town, yet the rivalry is sharp. A large immigration comes in from overflowed Portland and from San Francisco, and the Canadian Pacific Railroad brings a large number of the adventurous and speculating class from the far East, and from along the line of the sterile section through which it runs. The Canadian Pacific is getting, however, the bulk of the Puget Sound traffic; also, a very large share of the Pacific Coast business.
The Northern Pacific charges $70 per passenger from this place to St. Paul;
the Canadian Pacific charges only $55.
The reduction of freight rates over canadian is in about the same proportion. This cut into the business of the Canadian is in about the same proportion. This cut into the business of the Northern Pacific, or Oregon and California road, is making things lively for the Sound towns that have been choked and held back so long by this railroad highway robbery trust, and the "railroad towns" are not having it their own way so much now as formaris.

Portland has improved wonderfully within the past few months. On the line of railroad, about 1500 miles, I noticed a large number of "new towns"—not towns of stakes, containing a real estate office, a hotel and saloon, but towns of houses, and no streets. What struck me strangely was that the towns are built in the woods. Actually the residences and business houses of these new Oregon and Washington towns are built in the forests. There are no streets, but little foot-paths lead from the saloon to the hotel, or the of railroad, about 150 miles, Inoticed a large number of "new towns"—not towns of stakes, containing a real estate office, a hotel and saloon, but towns of stakes, containing a real estate office, a hotel and saloon, but towns of thouses, and no streets. What struck me strangely was that the towns are built in the woods. Actually the built in the woods. Actually the built in the woods. Actually the built in the forests. There is are no streets, but little foot-paths lead from the saloon to the hotel, or the real-estate office, or from one place to another, and where there is no "commerce" or travel, the undergrowth is not cut down.

But, these typical far northwestern towns are alive to the necessity of advertising. On the store, nearest the railroad station, is seen a canvas, covering one side of the building, in which is given everything about the town and county that the most inquisitive land-seeker would want to know. The enterprising saloon-keeper also emblazons upon the entire side of his wooden shanty, the fact that he keeps "flasks already filled," and "flasks filled on amoment's notice" avidant he his description of the main entrances directly into the "pit," as it is called, or by climbing the hill outside, find himself at once on a level with the topmost places in the synagogue, from which he process the process of the synagogue, from which he places in the synagogue, from which he

Many of these little towns are the outgrowth of the lumber business—inhabited mainly by lumber-mill men. Yet, a great many are built from a growing necessity of the country. Its rapid settlement demands new towns; and, instead of there being more towns than people, as was the case in the days of Southern California's boom, there are enough people to justify the towns, and they will last. They have got the people, and now are building the towns for the accommodation, or rather convenience, of the agricultural settlers and lumber-mill men. The forests tiers and lumber-millimen. The forests are being rapidly denuded of timber, and the various lumber trusts are reaping a rich harvest, and in a few years will practically exhaust the supply, if they are permitted to continue their vandalism at the present rate.

A Boom Strikes Anaheim.

Dr. J. Pfenniger closed the sale of 75 feet of his superb property cornering on Center and Adelaide streets to Mr. J. P. Arrogue, last Monday, the consideration being $1200 cash. Mr. Arrogue announces that he will shortly begin the erection of a $2000 residence, and also a business block, on his purchase. This is an important sale, and the beginning of what knowing ones say points to new building ing ones say points to new building and business life in Anaheim.

Historical Injustice to Logan.

Messrs. Nicolay and Hay are undoubtedly mistaken in their intimation that Gen. Logan did not have President Lincoln's permission to come north and make political speeches during the war; and is to be regretted that they have seen fit thus to question both the military fidelity and the personal veracity of one of the foremost of American soldiers.

A Notorious Truth.

The editor of a country newspaper will and does grant more favors, without pay or thanks, in a month than any other business man in a year. It is also a well-established fact that he will receive more all-round cussing in a week than any other man in a lifetime. That is the reason he is not afraid of hell.

CHAUTAUQUA (N. Y.), July 20. Special Correspondence of THE TIMES. That genial soul — Tom Atherton—said long ago that all good Bostonians when they died went to Paris. To this well-known phrase I would add that all good Americans, including big delegations from Canada and Europe, come to Chautauqua before they die, if they are wise.

At our C.L.S.C. roundtable the other evening there were present members from the New England, Middle, Southern and Western States, besides Canada, and one representative from Russia. A number of students from Edinburgh, Oxford and Dublin have been here for a few days as delegates from their various colleges, and gave us interesting accounts of the work done by these great universities across the sea. I note on the register the names of several California people, also representatives from Oregon, Washington Territory and Dakota.

Washington Territory and Dakota.

During the past week we have been enjoying a series of readings from original manuscript by Donald G. Mitchell (Ik Marvel), who has become famous in the literary world by his newspaper contributions and his quaint, bright books, "Reveries of a Bachelor," "Dream Life," "My Farm of Edgewood," etc. Mr. Mitchell is fully 70 years of age, and so feeble that he sits in a chair as he reads in a delightful conversational style his sketches of Queen Elizabeth, Philip Sidney or Spenser, whose "Fairie Queen" he pronounces "a great, cumbersome, bewildering, meandering poem," and declares that he has vainly tried to interest himself in it. "I have studied it after dinner of a midsummer day and gone to sleep," he have studied it after dinner of a mid-summer day and gone to sleep," he says. "I have read passages from it in the long winter evenings and gone to sleep. I have risen early of a spring morning to con its pages and gone to— breakfast." He gave a delightful description of good Queen Anne, who would spell pionetically, and who played havoc with the tenses; of ugly little Daniel Defoe, of whom he said: "I think he was the first and best of all interviewers; would he had been the last."

to the endless encores which greet them on every occasion.

Last week Chautauqua was somewhat shocked, to draw it mildly. A New York elecutionist appeared on the platform and created very much the same sensation among cultured, critical Chautauquans that Mrs. James Brown-Potter did in Washington a few years ago when she produced "Ostler Joe" before the lords and ladies of our national capital. The Gotham lady in question gave several selections that were exceedingly tame, and some of them in rather questionable taste. Her production of the "Status Queen" from Shakespeare's Winter's Tale was the only really good thing in the whole evoning's antertainment.

at once on a level with the topmost places in the synagogue, from which he may descend down the inclined aisles and occupy any seat that may chance to be vacant. The sides are not into be vacant. The sides are not inclosed, so that an extra 2000 may stand about the outer circles, and it is no uncommon thing, on specially interesting occasions, to see many a Zacharias perched in a convenient tree near by, or in the net-work of timbers that support the flat roof above. At the rear of this immense horseshoe, just back of the platform, is the gallery, having at either end a ground entrance. Here sits the Chautauqua choir of 300 voices, and in the center, ingeniously built into the the building itself, is the famous pipe organ, the gift of 'Lewis Miller, Esq. of Akron, O., who is the financial backbone of Chautauqua. It is made of curly maple and the word "Chautauqua" is beautifully carved on its surface. It is skilfully manipulated by M. V. Flagler of Boston. If you would have a glimpse of a Chautauqua congregation imagine this great amphitheater filled, from center to outer rim, with an audience of as intelligent, cultivated people as gather anywhere; crowd the aisles and passageways, overflow the outskirts with the eager multitude, place upon the platform a Talmage, a Phillips Brooks, a Gunsalus or a Joseph Cook, flood the whole interior with the bright, white glow of the electric light, and as the last peal of the great organ dies away look upon that vast sea of upturned faces, listen to the thunders of applause that greet the speaker, and if in your soul there throbs not one responsive chord, and you feel not one burst of genuine Chautauqua enthusiasm, then there is a great lack in your mental mechanism somewhere.

The bells are also a delightful feature, poised in the tower above the wharf. Every evening their musical tones chime out across the waters in perfect harmony the air of "Home, Sweet Home," "Down on de Swanee Ribber," "Nearer My God to Thee" or some other tamiliar tune.

In the line of amusements, baseball is receiving a good deal of attention by those who are athletically inclined. Stagg, Yale's favorite pitcher, has arrived and will captain the Chautauqua nine. Poole, the regu

INSIDE SCENES DESCRIBED BY ONE OF THE FAIR BATHERS.

The Procession in White Regalia Some of the Bathers-A Bride Belle of the Bath-The Plunge Gossip in the Steam Room

[Washington Star.]

The ladies' favorite hour for bathing in Washington's Turkish bath is from 10 to 2, before the grand promenade on the avenue, the drive in the Soldiers' Home grounds, the matinée, or the fashionable calling dress parade of the afternoon, and between those hours they may be seen trooping into the baths. All sorts of women may be found there. Fat women go to get thin, and thin women to get fat. Plain women go with an indefinite hope that it may make them beastiful, and beautiful women go in order to preserve their beauty; sick women go to get well; old women go to look young, tired women to feel rested, and misanthropic, bilious, sallow, malarial women to get their complexions and dispositions cleared up; stylish women go because it is fashionable; dainty women because it is iuxurious sweet, and wholesome; ordinary women go from a laudable ambition to be clean go because it is fashionable; dainty women because it is luxurious sweet, and wholesome; ordinary women go from a laudable ambition to be clean in the fullest sense of the word.

They come in carriages and on foot; they come with their maids in attendance, they come chattering along in pairs, and they come tripping in alose; they come in the daintest of toilets—all shimmer and dazzle and perfume, with stylish coiffures and picturesque arrangements of gauze and flowers framing their pretty faces, and they disappear in the dressing-rooms, and presently reappear clothed only in diamonds and sheets, with their hair, be it sparse or heavy, hanging over their shoulders. There is a little display of womanly vanity and taste even in the arrangement of the long white wrappings that envelop them, for while some women muffle themselves up awkwardly and clumsily and trip over the trailing corners, others throw the white draperies in classic folds about their forms, gathering them up in one hand away from the bare white ankles.

THE ATTENDANTS.

THE ATTENDANTS. THE ATTENDANTS.

The attendants present the most picturesque appearance. These girls are beautiful in form, and their skin is as soft to the touch as that of a baby's; not an ounce of superfluous flesh incumbers them; not an outline of bone or joint mars the roundness of shoulders and limbs. They seldom know disease of any kind, and are splendid specimens of physical strength and symmetry. Their hands are never exposed to any other kind of work, and posed to any other kind of work, and are soft as velvet, supple, firm and ex-quisite in touch.

These scantily clad apparitions flit along the corridors leading to the bathrooms, and after them scurry the white and muffled white figures of the bathers, who seat themselves about the heated rooms in constrained silence, like the first arrivals at a wedding feast. There is the nervous woman, who comes flying in with a little bottle of smelling salts, and sits anxiously on the edge of the chair, exclaiming that she knows that she can never stand the baths; that the doctor has ordered them, and that she knows she hasn't strength to endure them, and SOME OF THE BATHERS. ordered them, and that she knows she hasn't strength to endure them, and she calls for an attendant to tell her all about it, and interrogates her neighbor to know if she isn't getting pale, as though even a corpse could be pale in a room at that temperature.

Then there is the talkative woman, who has a little bit of rheamatism or neuralgia in such a peculiar place, under her shoulder somewhere, and she tells all the other women about it, entering into the minute details with delightful eagerness; just what the doctor said, and what all the old ladies said, etc., ad infinitum.

doctor said, and what all the old ladies said, etc., ad infinitum.

Then there is the fussy woman, who exclaims about the heat, and says she is all burning up, and is sure something is wrong, and wants a drink, and wants her handkerchief, and wants her head cooler, asks half a hundred questions, and finally fldgets herself into a fever.

The shy little new-comer over in the corner, demurely wrapped up to her chin, even her hands tucked out of sight, smiles softly at the scene and wonders if the freckles across her nose will melt off. The habitues of the place lean back, leisurely dreaming of their conquests, their last souvenir night's triumphs and floral ovations, or their latest and dearest lovers, while their bangs slowly straighten out, and the perspiration meditatively drips off their noses. One slender, handsome woman, with a heavy mass of dark hair tossed over the back of the chair, one white arm outlined against its shadow above her head, the sheet falling from her faultless shoulder and bust, sits with her beautiful dreamy syes full of soft splendor, all unconscious of the perfect picture she is making in the white drapery through which her form is outlined.

making in the white drapery through which her form is outlined.

THE PLUNGE.

From the hotroom they are rushed across the corridor to the steam bath, where, on the marble seats the pretty bathers sit in various graceful attitudes, with bare arms and shoulders. One of them flies up suddenly and goes to the plunge. She puts one white foot in and draws it back with a little shiver, and screams; then she tries the other foot, another little squeal; the stout attendant catches her suddenly about the waist, and away they go, laughing and screaming together. The girl comes up, choking and rightened, but plucky, and they try it once more, the attendant endeavoring to teach her the stroke in swimming. After countless attempts, which inevitably end in failure, she abandons the idea and only tries to float; but even this is in vain, for as soon as she experiences the sensation incident to floating, down goes her head, because she opens her mouth to give the funny little scream that is the voice of most women's sensations. The attendant puts an end to her fears by hurrying her away to the drying-room.

Suddenly a mammoth woman is filled with ambition, and she plunges her Suddenly a mammoth woman is filled with ambition, and she plunges her generous proportions into the tank. The water splashes to the brim. Up and down the tank she swims and floats, while the water beats against the sides of the tank in swift recoil, like the wave on the seashore.

Then climbing upon the steps, puff.

"Georgie. Georgie, go and attend to your bride," whispered the manager. Now, the bride was, as a matter of course, the prettiest girl in the place, with big brown eyes flashing under a tangle of yellow hair that fell over faultiess dimpled shoulders down to her walst; but the prettiest thing about her was her dainty little feet, pink and women were chatting, eating rolls and drinking chocolate and coffe, and shouting for the attendants in impatient tones, while their maids waited outside the door to dress them. In the double rooms friends were discussing the usual vexing questions which agitats the feminine mind—dress, bonnets, servants and husbands.

"But I don't want her," was the exclamation of a fidgety old maid, which was heard all over the bath. "I won't have her. She hasn't treated me right. I sent her special word that I would be ready at 12 o'clock, and she has kept me waiting half an hour. I won't stand such treatment from any one, and—I"— But she was torn off, still sputtering, by the patient attendants. "Does she come here often?"

"About once a year, but that is often enough, for she is such a fidget. She didn't come until 12 o'clock, as usual, the busiest hour in the day, and she wants more attention than two women need."

"Are many women exactly like that?"

"Plenty of them. Some women

"Plenty of them. Some women want the world, you know, and every one in it to wait on them, but they don't get it here. We try to serve all alike. We give them each the attention in here they need, and no more."

bath?"
"Regular customers come once a week, twice a week, and some times every other day. All kinds of people come, of course, but the department ladies and invalids come oftenest. Of course many wealthy and society ladies come, too, because they enjoy this luxury, which they cannot have at their own homes. The Turkish bath is a great boon to those ladies confined to their desks all day, and they know it and appreciate it."

THE BELLE OF THE BATH.

THE BELLE OF THE BATH. While the conversation was going on the pretty bride had aroused from her While the conversation was going on the pretty bride had aroused from her sweet slumbers and was arraying herself in the daintiest of habiliments. Over the pink and white feet were fitted stockings of silk, and around the plump shoulders was drawn a silken vest, fastened with a ribbon shirr. The corset was pale blue moire, flossed and laced with white; the underskirt a delicate blue surah, frilled with snowy lace, all the perfumed lingeric as fine as a baby's christening robe, edged with skirts a mass of tucks and flounces of lace, and over it all a wonderful combination of harmonious bleoding, shades of green in drass and bounct. She litted, and looking like a pink and white sweet pea, all a dazzle from the fluffy coil of her yellow hair to the hem of her shimmering gown. As she entered the reception-room she met her partner in life, who had just finished his bath on the floor below, and the belie of the baths was handed into a carriage and hurried away, as dainty and sweet and happy a woman as the continent contains. dainty and sweet and happy a woman as the continent contains Grant as a Wood-cutter.

[Judge Lanham in St Louis Republic.]
Grant used to chop cord-wood in a peculiar way, cutting the tree all around instead of half down one side and then on the other, like the ordinary axman. While President he visited St. Louis, and I went with him to his farm, and passing the spot where he once chopped wood I said: "General, the fellow who cut those stumps was a poor wood-chopper. don't you eral, the fellow who cut those stumps was a poor wood-chopper, don't you think so?" The President replied with a sigh: "That might be true, Judge, but to tell the truth, I was happier then than now. I cut my wood, hauled it to the city, got my price for it and returned to my family and was nappy; but now the burden of a nation is on me, and I know no rest. Those were happy days, Judge."

me, and I know no rest. Those were happy days, Judge."

Grant's Gallantry About His Wife's Eyes.

[New York Graphic.]

It is doubtful whether any chronicle or romance of the days of chivalry contains so touching an instance of matrimonial devotion as that lately told of Gen. Grant. When the honors came upon the Grants like sorrows to the house of Denmark, "not single spies, but battalions," the mistress of the White House began to renew the dream of her girlhood—to have her crosseyes straightened. Wishing to surprise the President, Mrs. Grant, telling nobody, sent for the most eminent occulist in America. He willingly promised to undertake the operation, which, he assured her, would be easy to accomplish, and without danger. The good lady could not contain herself for joy, and, womanlike (am I right, mesdames?) gave way when she saw her husband and confided to him her secret, the pleasure she had in store for him. He looked wistfully into those dear eyes which had held him with tender gaze through all the trials of a checkered career, and said, in a simple way: "Julia, I wish you would not change them, I love them as they are, and they might seem strange if altered." Nor Launcelot, nor Romeo, nor lover of any climate or age, ever spoke words of tenderer gallantry than those of the hero of Appomattox.

The water splashes to the brim. Up and down the tank she swims and floats, while the water beats against the sides of the tank in swift recoil, like the wave on the seashore.

Then, climbing upon the steps, puffing and blowing, she flings herself into the water with a splash that sends it flying over the railing, and makes all the pretty girls jump and 'instinctively dip down to pull their skirts out of the way, after the manner of women, but finding only the damp sheets, they swile.

WOMAN AND HOME.

THE POSSIBILITY OF AN ETER-NAL YOUTH.

weets for the Young Folks-"We Girls" - Mrs. Gen. Fremont -Mothers Should Keep Abreast of the Times-Be Life Students

I know a woman who is a wise mother, in that she endeavors to keep abreast of the times, and especially is she careful that in matters of education her children shall not get beyond her. She is middle aged, and of course ther school days the advantages offered were not what they are now. But she has been all her life a diligent student, and from the dawn of the Chautauquan idea until now has been a faithful student in that great university of the people. Said her daugh-ter to me one day, "I never knew a person so well read as mamma is; she ter to me one day, "I never knew a person so well read as mamma is; she knows at least a little of everything. There is nothing so delights me as to go calling with mamma, as I sometimes do. I love to listen to her, she talks so beautifully and so well. I learn a great deal in that way."

How many mothers are there of whom their children can say as much? How many who feel that with marriage their destiny is accomplished.

"O, mother is old-fashioned," I heard a young girl remark not long since, and then, latea, as her mother called her attention to some error that she had committed, she added, "O, you don't know, mother; you have queer, old-fashioned notions."

"My dear," responded the mother, who was really a progressive woman, "there is one of two things true, either your mother has not the intelligence and culture which her daughter possesses, or else her daughter is very rude and inexcusably self-assertive; which is it, my dear?"

The daughter stood rebuked.

There is too great a tendency among young people of the present day to attempt the training of their parents. They forget that the really progressive, observant and well-read person does not grow old-fashioned; that he or she is wise with a larger experience, learned through observation, and has as much his or her place in the world of today as the child has.

I have known women who could never grow old. Look for instance at if they would enjoy even the sweets of candy-making. I will tell them how to make several kinds of confectionery, which, with care not to scorch while cooking, will be just as nice as can be bought of the regular manufacturer:

Molasses Candy.—This is the way to make the molasses candy of our grandmothers' time: One quart of molasses, and butter the size of an egg. Boil over a brisk fire till it will harden when dropped into water. Add one teaspoonful of carbonate of soda to make it white and brittle, and when almost done one teaspoonful of essence of wintergreen. To be pulled while warm, with buttered hands, and cut in sticks.

warm, with buttered hands, and cut in sticks.

Lemon Drops.—Upon one-half a pound of powdered sugar pour just enough lemon juice to dissolve it, and boil to the consistency of thick syrup. Drop this on plates, and put it in a warm place to harden. By using raspberry syrup instead of lemon juice you have raspberry drops.

Cocoand Drops.—Boil together four cups of water, two and a half pounds of line white sugar, four spoonsfuls of vinegar and a piece of butter the size of an egg, till thick, or nearly an hour. Just before removing from the fire stir in one cup of desiccated cocoanut, and lay in small flat cakes on buttered plates to cool and harden.

Boston Caramels.—One pint Baker's grated chocolate, one pint of New Orleans molasses, one half a cup of milk, a piece of butter the size of a small egg, and vanilla flavor. Boil about 25 minutes. It should not be so brittle as other candies. Pour in buttered tins, and mark in squares deeply with a knife. tins, and mark in squares deeply with a knife.

Chocolate Cream Drops.—Mix one-half a cup of cream with two of white sugar. Boil and stir full five minutes. Set the dish into another of cold water, and stir until it becomes hard; then make into small balls about the size of marbles, and with a fork roll each one separately in the chocolate, which has in the meantime been melted in a bowl over the boiling tea-kettle. Put on brown paper to cool. Flavor with vanilla, if liked. This amount makes about 50 drops.

wanilla, if liked. This amount makes about 50 drops.

Marshnallow Paste.—Dissolve half a pound of white gum arable in one pint of water; strain, and add half a pound of fine sugar, and place over the fire, stirring constantly till the syrup is dissolved and all is of the consistency of honey; then add gradually the whites of four eggs, well beaten; stir the mixture till it becomes somewhat thin and does not adhere to the finger. Pour all into 2 pan slightly dusted with powdered starch, and when cold divide into small squares. Flavor to the taste just before pouring out.

FRESH LITERATURE.

A PHILOSOPHEE IN LOVE AND IN UNI-FORM. By the Author of "Napeleon Smith." Hustrated. (New York: The Judge Publishing Company.) This story is a clear, ingenious and well-written one, in which theosophy and war are mingled, though the one is not at all a necessity for the pur-poses of the story to the other. The cene of the tale is middle Tennessee the time 1863. There is a brief but exceptionally vivid and well-written allusion-it is a little more-to Gen Thomas's part in the battle of Chick-allusion—it is a little more—to Gen. Thomas's part in the battle of Chickamauga, and there are some revolting pictures of some of the abuses incident to war and the placing of unworthy men in positions of authority. It seems sure that at least one of the authors saw something of army life. The main thread of the story, hewever, is the theosophic one. The hero is a student of "the occult," who, in the stereotyped vein of these speculative tales, has prolonged his life through a century or two and at last feigns or simulates death to test his theory, is entombed in a certain way, leaving certain instructions behind him, which, however, are destroyed by accident, and it is not till seven years are past that any effort is made to restore him. As he comes back to live he declares that all the efforts such as he had made toward study of "the occult" are foolish and fruitless; that knowledge will come in good time; that man should live in harmony with his environments, in the joys of love and human companionship and generosity and charity and right living: and that the one thing really needful to perfect content is the faith of a little child in the Christ as the Son of God. It is a commonplace ending from a certain point of view, for the same asservation, the same exhortation has been reached many times before. It is, in another sease, a profound moral; but it does not yet touch the bottom of the theme. As man is constituted, it is the faith itself that brings content and peace, no matter whether it be faith in one God or another. History is packed full of eviden: eof this from its dawn till today. This queer, entertaining story is right as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. It makes only one application of what must be, if true at all, a universal truth.

Magazines.

Lippincott for August is upon our table, and in slowly turning over its leaves and glancing here and there at I have known women who could never grow old. Look for instance at Mrs. Gen. Fremont with her fair, unwrinkled face, and her interest as keen and active in the concerns of today as is that of the boys and girls in our schools. Yet she is the mother of grown-up men and women, and she has lived life under almost every condition—in the city and on the wild frontier, away from the church and the school-house and all the conditions of civilization. Yet when such exile was ended she would go back to metropolitan life, ready to take her place in the circles of wealth and culture, as bright an ornament as could be found among them. Such women never grow "old fashioned," because their spirits are always young and they never cease to be students.

Mothers, never feel that you are old enough to lay away your books. Read, reflect, and keep your eye always upon those things which interest your children.

Said a friend to me not long ago, "Susan, I do not believe you will ever grow old with your young daughters about you." And I think she was right, for I feel hardly older than they and only a short time since I laughed quietly to myself over remark which it contains we are assured that it is a number of more than ordinary it is a number of more than ordinary which it contains we are assured that it is a number of more than ordinary which it contains we are assured that it is a number of more than ordinary it is an unber of more than ordinary it is an unber of more than ordinary it is an aumber of more than ordinary it is number of more than ordinary it is not an unber of more than ordinary it is an unber of more than ordinary in the Enemy." and it is from the pen of "Recollections of George W. The United States Ship Constitution-Croghan's Gallant Defense -William Wilberforce-The Romantic Career of Don Sebastian-Anniversaries.

Commodore Hull was one of the most adroit of American seamen. Having sailed from Annapolis to New York on July 29, 1812, his ship, the Constitution, fell in with the British squadron off New York. After a re-markable chase of four days, the Constitution, sometimes towed by her boats, for the wind came in light breezes with frequent calms, some-times forcing herself forward by means of hedge anchors, careered ahead, for the chase was mostly over soundings, exhausting in fact, with the greatest skill and perseverance, every nautical resource, and now and then exchanging shots with the headmost of her pursuers, the Constitution escaped to Boston, where the Secretary of the Navy sent orders to Hull to remain, but the intrepid Commodore had anticipated the order by once more putting to sea to prey upon British commerce.

CROGHAN'S GALLANT DEFENSE. On July 29, 1813, the fort at lower Sandusky, which was defended by the gallant young officer, Maj. Croghan, who was only 21 years old, with 150 men, was attacked by the British. General W. H. Harrison, stationed ten miles from the fort, ordered it to be abandoned as not being tenable, but the place being already invested by the enemy, young Croghan took the responsibility of defending it. After a cannonade by some gunboats, an assault was attempted on August 3d, but the savages were repulsed with considerable loss. Gen. Proctor was alarmed at the progress of American naval preparations at Erie, and had collected a body of Indians for offensive o, crations which had terminated in the above defeat at lower Sandusky. Sandusky, which was defended by the dusky.

WILLIAM WILBERFORCE

was born in Hull, England, where his ancestors had long carried on a successful trade. He completed his studies at Cambridge, where he made a life-long friendship with William Pitt. Wilberforce was elected to Parliament for Hull soon after becoming of age, and for 45 years exercised the greatest influence of any one not in office. In an eloquent speech, delivered in May, 1789, he declared that 38,000 necroes were annually imported into the West Indies, and demanded the abolition of this nefarious trade. Year after year this unpopular bill was urged by its unwearied advocate, and defeated each time with steadily decreasing majorities. But 17 years passed before, Pitt having died, Mr. Fox introduced a bill for the immediate abolition of the slave trade, which was carried by a majority of 114 to 15. Wilberforce had been elected to Parliament four times for the county of York, but in 1807 he was bitterly opposed by two powerful families, but 11,000 votes placed him at the head of the polls, while the other two candidates had 10,000 votes each. Wilberforce died in London July 29, 1833.

Moors near Tangiers on July 29, 1578, closed one of the most romantic careers closed one of the most romantic careers in modern history. This enthusiastic Prince was only two and twenty-one when he chose to conduct the military strength of Portugal into Morocco, in order to put down an usurper. The expedition was extravagant and foolish, but Sebastian could not be dissuaded from taking it. He fought a desperate battle with the Moors at Alcazar, performed prodigies of valor, and was nevertheless so thoroughly defeated that scarcely 50 of his army escaped alive. A body supposed to be that of the King was given up by the Moors and interred at Belem, but his countrymen, who admired and loved him, considered him as having mysteriously disappeared, and that he would by and by reappear and claim the throne. Strange to say, this notion continued to prevail after the exwould by and by reappear and claim the throne. Strange to say, this notion continued to prevail after the expiration of the time within which the natural life of Don Sebastian must have been circumscribed; indeed, it became a kind of religious belief, which passed on from one generation of Portuguese to another, and has even survived to very recent times. As late as 1825 many persons at Portugal and Brazil till believed in the coming of Don Sebastian. Some of these old visionaries would go out wrapped in their large cloaks on a windy night to watch the movements of the heavens, and frequently if an exhalation was seen fitting in the air, resembling a falling star, they would cry out: "There he comes." Sales of horses and other things were often effected, payable at the coming of King Sebastian. It was this fact that induced Marshal Junct, when asked what he would be able to do with the Portuguese, to answer: "What can I do with a people who are still waiting for the coming of Messiah and King Sebastian?"

BRONCHITIS.

Acute Bronchitis.

This is an inflammation of the mucous membrane ining the bronchial tubes, and is one of the most common of all the pulmonary discases. It is a dangerous disease, as it prevents the oxygenation of the blood, and in many cases, particularly after it passes into the chronic stage, the substance of the lungs becomes seriously involved, giving rise to what is very properly called bronchial consumption. In the acute form there is a sense of tightness or pressure across the chest, with considerable wheening, severe cough and expectorat on. This is at first a white glairy mucus, which after a time becomes purulent. The patient in some cases is obliged to sit up in patient in some cases is obliged to sit up in patient in some cases is obliged to stup in patient in some cases is obliged to stup in patient in some cases in construction rapidly sets in, and in fatal cases there will be muttering delirium, come and coath.

Chronic Bronchitis.

Chronic Bronchitis.

Chronic Bronchitis is also an inflammation of the mucous membrane of bronchial tubes. But this form more often occurs tater in life. When a cold settles on the lungs, the disease either ends in bronchits or pneumonia. If it ends in bronchits it usually passes off as a celd in the chest, and still the patient does not feel entirely well. He feels tired and languid, and is incapable of taking his usual amount of exercise, and experiences a shortness of breath, with more or less warmth in the palms of his hands. Soon after this a cough appears, accompanied by an expectoration of thick mucous. followed by a hectic flush, loss of fiesh and strength, and night sweats continue, when the patient assumes all the appearance of having a genuine case of consumption. But this is simply extarrh of the lungs, or chronic bronchitis.

In the latter stages of the disease the mucous membrane of the larger bronchial tuber comes congested and inflamed. There are no existing or tubercles in the lungs, but merely wasting away of the larger bronchial tubes, and death takes place from obstruction of the bronchial tubes are air cells of the lungs. The patient dies from exhaustion and suffocation, being unable to expectorate the mucous which accumulates in the passage leading to the lungs which in some cases is sticky and small in quantity, but more commonly copious, of alght straw or yellowing freen. Oftentimes streets of blood make their appearance in the mucous, and at times there is a disagreeable smell. Forsons thus affilicted are very liable to take cold, at which time the mucous are thus affilicted are very liable to take cold, at which time the mucous are thus affilicted are very liable to take cold, at which time the mucous are thus affilicted are one of the ease that the patient dies in one of these attacks.
